This letter is being provided to explain the allergen status of our wheat flour products.

Column 1 indicates which allergens may be found in the product, either by addition or by cross-contamination.

Column 2 indicates which allergens are used in other products, which may be run at different times on the same equipment at the flour milling facility.

Column 3 indicates if any of these potential allergens are present in the flour milling facility.

*The allergens listed as may be present in the facility are in finished product packaged goods for redistribution. These products are received, stored, and shipped in their original format and are isolated in finished product warehouses within the facilities.

Due to the agricultural nature of our products and the complexity of the agricultural supply chain, wheat flour may contain trace amounts of soy that is unintentionally present due to cross-contact of raw agricultural commodities occurring prior to the milling process, and which, despite adherence to Good Manufacturing Practices (GMPs) cannot be completely removed. The FDA has clarified that FALCPA* labeling requirements do not apply in this case, so we will not be labeling soy at this time.

*Food Allergen Labeling & Consumer Protection Act (FALCPA)

Milling Facility Location(s): Clifton NJ, Indiantown FL, Mooresville NC, Tolleston AZ

My signature below acknowledges that all King Arthur Baking Company products milled by Bay State Milling Company have this Allergen Statement as documented.
